

AFRICAN ELEPHANT'S IVORY TRADE

African elephants are the world's largest land mammals, with males, on average, reaching up to 3 meters in height and weighing up to 6 tonnes. Following population declines over several decades due to poaching for ivory, a ban was imposed in 1989 forbidding the international trade in ivory to reverse a rapid decline in the population of African Elephants.

TWO SUBSPECIES, TWO HOMES

The larger savannah elephant (Loxodonta africana), which roams on grassy plains and woodlands, and the smaller forest elephant (Loxodonta cyclotis), which lives in the equatorial forests of central and western Africa.

FOREST ELEPHANT Loxodonta cyclotis	NAME	SAVANNAH ELEPHANT Loxodonta cyclotis
West & Central Africa	LOCATION	Eastern & Southern Africa
2.4-3 meters	HEIGHT	3-4 meters
2-5 tons	WEIGHT	4-7 tons

A single large tusk can sell on the black market for $6,000

Bracelet
16th century, Ivory
Yoruba artist, Owo, Nigeria

A LUXURY OBJECT
Ivory was traded widely from the 15th through the 19th centuries and was prized as a luxury item not only in Africa but throughout Europe and other parts of the world. Ivory carvings were also commissioned by foreign kings.
The carved hunting horn made in the late 15th century by a Bulom or Temne artist was given as a gift by Prince Manuel of Portugal to King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain.

IVORY MARKET

The U. S. is the world's second largest retail market for elephant ivory products (behind only China).

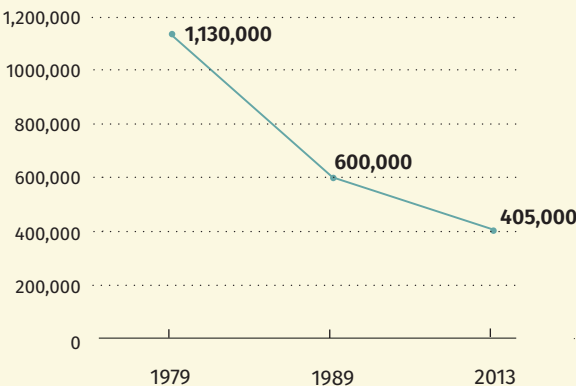

IVORY SEIZURES IN ASIA (1989-2011)

Weight of seizures in kilograms

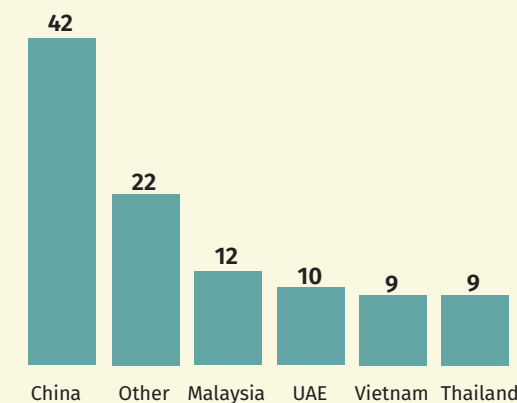

ELEPHANT POPULATION

Approximately 415,000 elephants live in the wild

IVORY SHIPMENT

Illegal ivory shipments, by destination country, 2006 - 2015 (in metric tons)

POACHING OF ELEPHANTS

Number of elephants poached in Africa by subregion, 2010-2013

